

Benefits & Importance Of School-Based Community Health Centers

Short-term benefits

School-based community health centers will provide real-life care and assistance to our school community as we begin the recovery phase of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Long-term benefits

Over the long-term, school-based community health centers and the services they provide align with the important WHOLE child approach to a successful education.

STRIDE School-Based Community Health Centers

Will work to remove barriers, such as institutionalized racism, and provide direct access to quality care.

Can assist in avoiding unnecessary absences as students can be seen before, DURING, or after the school day.

Can provide a medical home for students, their families, CCSD staff, and community members.

Can provide multigenerational health care for our families and community.

Create a lasting CONTINUITY OF CARE from intake/assessment through diagnosis, treatment, and future follow-up.

Can provide a meaningful bridge of care through a close collaboration with CCSD school nurses, who know their students and families well.

Can decrease instances where families are forced to seek routine medical care at urgent care/emergency departments.

Can potentially decrease out-of-pocket costs.
